Shell Suber, former political director for Senator Lindsey Graham's successful 2008 reelection campaign has joined the Greenville, SC based firm The Felkel Group as Vice President for Public Affairs and Business Development. Suber, who will be located in Columbia, SC, will oversee key advocacy and public sector business development accounts on a statewide basis as the firm continues to expand. Suber brings an understanding of the business world gained during years spent in the banking and insurance industries. Combined with his experience as a staff member for Senator Thurmond, a lobbyist and a longtime GOP activist and highly regarded political operative, Suber brings extensive contacts and experience to the firm's clients.

Suber has volunteered his service to numerous community organizations including the Columbia Citadel Club (President, 2005), The Citadel Alumni Association (District Director, 2007), The Greater Columbia Chamber of Commerce (Intergovernmental Relations Committee, 2004-2005) The Columbia Museum of Art Contemporaries Society (Vice President, 2000). Suber is a Columbia, SC native and 1989 graduate of The Citadel. He and his wife Jennifer have two children, Abby and Walt.

The Felkel Group, now in its tenth year, is an integrated strategic communications firm that provides messaging and advocacy on public policy issues, guidance and counsel to senior level decision-makers along with an expanding public and private sector business development practice. The firm works with Fortune 500 companies, associations and emerging organizations seeking reality based, objective assistance.

In addition to its traditional communications work, TFG's proprietary public affairs software solution, The RAP Index®, continues to attract new clients from around the country. The tool provides key intelligence on stakeholder relationships with over 28,000 policy makers, as well as on their willingness and ability to serve as effective advocates.
